SAWYER TO AIR PARTY AFFAIRS, ITS CHAIRMAN

COLUMBUS, Sept. 2—Besides discussing party affairs at a meeting to be called soon by Charles Sawyer, Democratic national committeeman, the state executive committee will take up the status of State Chairman Arthur L. Limbach, New Philadelphia, it was learned today. The meeting was arranged following a contention of Francis W. Durbin, Lima, prominent Ohio Democrat, that Limbach was not devoting enough of his time to Democratic affairs.

"If I were Arthur Limbach I would resign from the National Guard and devote more of my time to being state chairman," Durbin said at a meeting called last Sunday to speed a civil service referendum drive.

There were reports that should Limbach resign or be ousted Henry C. Brunner, Mansfield, state manager of the Home Owners Loan Association, would succeed him. There was a question, however, whether Brunner would accept the post if it was offered to him, sources at Democratic headquarters said.

Armies Move Ahead Of Objectives In Pole Area

BERLIN, Sept. 2—The German army is steadily closing off the Polish Corridor from Pomerania, the German high command stated in a communique issued today.

BERLIN, Sept. 2—The German army resumed its advance on all fronts in Poland today, according to an authoritative statement by military quarters in Berlin.

"The troops quickly captured the Jablunka Pass connecting Slovakia and Poland," a statement asserted.

"Numerous enemy airplanes were destroyed by aerial attacks on scores of Polish aerodromes." (Editor's note: This was the first formal indication since late last night that German military operations in Poland have continued into their second day, despite last night's Anglo-French demand for immediate suspension. No other news of continued operations had previously been permitted to seep out from any official source.)

The progress has been made, these quarters said, "despite heavy resistance and blown up roads."

Objectives Passed
German troops captured the Polish city of Teschen and advanced as far as Pless-Nikolai, the statement said. The forces occupied Wieroszow, east of Kempen, as well as Klobuck and Schildberg.

In the Polish Corridor, German troops reached the most important railway line, known as the "coal line" between Bromberg and Gdynia near Culm. It is over this line that coal is transported northward to Gdynia.

A tiny ray of hope that a European war may be averted sprouted today on the basis of reliable indications that Reichsfuehrer Hitler's answer to the British and French demand for cessation of hostilities may contain a peace offer, the Fuehrer utilizing an opportunity to present them with a fait accompli in Danzig and the Corridor.

Channels Still Open
Although real peace hopes were frail, responsible quarters at noon were still stressing the fact that (Continued on Page Eight)

BABSON TO RUN FOR PRESIDENT ON DRY TICKET?

CHICAGO, Sept. 2—Roger W. Babson was formally aligned with the Prohibition Party today as its likely candidate for President of the United States in 1940.

A message from him read at the party's seventieth anniversary celebration last night, stated: "Democracy will never be saved by the Republican or Democratic machines. The only hope now lies with some coalition or a new party. I believe the Prohibition Party is this party. I now align myself with this new kind of political party to help save the nation."

HAMMER SLAYING OF FRIEND'S SISTER CLEARED

CHICAGO, Sept. 2—The state's attorney's office today announced that Yorkie Bodden, 24, had confessed the hammer slaying of Miss Ann Riermaier, 25, who disappeared August 11, because she resented his attentions to her younger sister, Florence.

Bodden, it was said, led detectives to a culvert near Volo, Ill., where the body of the victim was recovered.

An announcement issued by the embassy said:

"Today Polish anti-aircraft batteries brought down three German airplanes near Cracow and four near Gdynia. "During the last raid on Warsaw this morning three women and two men were wounded by fragments of exploding bombs. SPEECH OF SIGNIFICANCE

European Combatants Pledge Selves Against Bombing Civilian Populaces

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—America organized today under the guidance of President Roosevelt to preserve and insure our neutrality as Europe's battlefields once more ran red with blood.

Citizens from every walk of life awaited the President's broadcast tomorrow night which the White House said would be "an informative message—a statement of position—tending to relieve anxiety and allay suspense."

Refreshed by a night's rest, Mr. Roosevelt today faced the task of framing this momentous address, which may well become one of the most important in his career. He already has said he believed the United States could keep out of Europe's wars and has pledged every effort of his administration to that end.

The White House was gratified by the unanimity with which the nation rallied behind the President as Germany flung her armed forces at Poland and defied England and France. Expressions such as that last night over the radio by former President Herbert Hoover calling on the country to support the executive and the congress in their moves to preserve neutrality were particularly well received.

To Prepare For Shock

Mr. Roosevelt also prepared to press the button that will put carefully planned machinery into operation to cushion the shock of European war on American economy—machinery designed to prevent price rises and protect finances.

The President and Secretary of State Hull viewed with satisfaction the latest note from Poland stating her supreme command had issued orders against "ruthless bombings of civilians in undefended centers," as urged by Mr. Roosevelt. The reply, made public by the state department last evening, asserted, however, that German Chancellor Hitler's bombers already had dropped tons of explosives (Continued on Page Eight)

Ray Fields, 26, of 585 George Street, Columbus, was freed by the Franklin County Grand Jury Friday, of a second degree manslaughter charge in the death of Roscoe Bailey, 39, of Circleville, in an auto crash recently on Route 23 near Shaderville. Bailey died of a broken neck and fractured skull. Fields was returned to North Carolina authorities as an escaped prisoner.

In Britain's War Cabinet

Sir Archibald Sinclair

Anthony Eden

THE British government holds plans in obedience for the formation of a war cabinet. This "inner cabinet" within the full cabinet would handle matters directly concerned with war activities. Probable members of such a group would include Winston Churchill, dissident Conservative and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Labor leader; Capt. Anthony Eden and former First Lord of the Admiralty Lord Alfred Duff Cooper. They may not become members of the war cabinet, but in all probability will be added to the outer group. Eden, former secretary, and Cooper left their ministerial posts in protests against the Munich agreement.

Rome Fears Complications If Allies Enter War; Shipments Halted

ROME, Sept. 2—Extreme concern over the possibility of imminent British and French action in Europe was expressed in Rome today.

It was feared that such action would result in complications for Italy. It was believed that Premier Mussolini's neutrality declaration, made yesterday, is subject to Britain's attitude.

Seven Steamers Prepare To Cross Atlantic To Bring Nationals Home

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—Seven trans-Atlantic liners were scheduled to sail today for European ports to return stranded and war-frightened Americans from abroad. Among the departures was the U. S. liner Washington carrying 500 extra cots to provide place for 1600 passengers. The Washington canceled a Bermuda cruise for its rescue work.

The other scheduled departures were those of the Franconia, Carinthia, Zaandam, Pennland, Scarpenn and Stavangerfjord.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—The Columbus, last of the German passenger ships on this side of the Atlantic, has landed its 755 cruise passengers at Havana and is at sea, presumably enroute to its home port, it was learned here today.

The passengers, whose pleasure cruise was suddenly interrupted by the war crisis, were kept in ignorance of the ship's course which was changed several times, according to messages here. They will be taken to Miami by boat.

HITLER CARRYING PISTOL TO END LIFE 'IN DEFEAT'

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—Since his dramatic war address to the Reichstag, Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany has been carrying a gun on his person with which to end his life should the tide of battle turn against Germany, according to a story in the London Daily Express.

In his Reichstag address announcing hostilities against Poland, the Fuehrer declared: "I will lead you to victory and if not to victory to my own death for I shall not live in defeat."

Populations Of Both Allied Powers Accept Conflict As Fact After Hitler Armies March On Poles

LONDON, Sept. 2—Without explanation, the scheduled address of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain outlining Great Britain's fateful decision in the light of Germany's invasion of Poland was postponed today.

When the House of Commons assembled at 8:45 A. M. (Circleville time) as scheduled, Chamberlain was understood to have enlarged his cabinet to include four new members, including Winston Churchill, automatically slated for inclusion when a "war government" was decided on.

The prime minister, however, was not present when the house met for an extraordinarily brief session and did not make the statement he had planned.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon told the house that Chamberlain would make a statement "later in the day."

All of French Soldiers Ready To Go To War

PARIS, Sept. 2—In a brief emergency session, the French Chamber of Deputies today heard a brief address by Edouard Herriot, president of the body, indicating early formation of a national union government.

Premier Edouard Daladier read a message from President Lebrun recapitulating all efforts which had been made in behalf of peace. He said the President was addressing a special message saluting "all soldiers under arms to defend the country's liberties."

Herriot's address constituted a firm defense of Poland.

"Poland, with whom we have been allied for centuries," he said, "is undergoing with her legendary courage the scientific attacks of barbarians."

"I give her, in our name, this expression of our solidarity. . . ."

"There is only one thing to do—unite as members of one family around a responsible government. "France's motto is 'without reproach.' She is also without blemish. Vive La France!"

Herriot made a brief reference to the pact signed by Soviet Russia "with the aggressor" and pointed to Communists in the chamber. All other political factions applauded him loudly.

The day of Armageddon found Paris calm and fully prepared, going about its business beneath a hot September sun and in a sultry and stifling atmosphere.

There seemed to be no question in Paris that armed action is impending. German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, it was learned, expressed amazement when the ultimatum was presented, (Continued on Page Eight)

By International News Service. Ted Williams — six-foot-three and 175 pounds—draws the little brass ring this week as the slugging rookie to hit the major leagues in many years.

Ball players call him another Babe Ruth in the making, and the records indicate they may be correct. Here he is—a boy only 20, playing his first year in the majors with the Red Sox—and hitting a nifty .314.

He already has driven in 117 runs—the true test of a hitter—to lead both leagues and the records do not disclose any other player who ever led one league, much less two, in his first year under the big tent.

COLUMBUSITE ON TOP IN TOURNEY FOR OLDER MEN

MANSFIELD, Sept. 2—By virtue of his 36-hole score of 157, Arthur D. Wolfe, 61, of Columbus, reigned today as king of Ohio's senior golfers. In his first attempt at the title, Wolfe carded an 82-75 to win the 11th annual senior tournament at Mansfield.

EXPERTS CLAIM INVADERS WILL WIN DAVIS CUP

Much Depends On Riggs' Ability Against Jack Bromwich

By Lawton Carver. HAVERFORD, Pa., Sept. 2 — Australia to win the Davis Cup by a margin of three matches to two was the consensus of expert and kibitzer opinion today as the United States began defense of the huge and unhandy chunk of bric-a-brac against the two-man challenging forces composed of John Bromwich and Adrian Quist. Making up the youngest combination ever to represent this country in cup warfare, Bobby Briggs, of Chicago, Frankie Parker and Jack Kramer, of California, and Joe Hunt, the Annapolis midshipman, had all the emulsion to be expected of their extreme youth and were encouragingly cocky about the thing. But also they have less tennis than the Austrian duo.

Thus a spirited battle was in prospect in the five-match series beginning this afternoon and lasting through Monday, with a chance at least of a close fight and with the remote possibility of a United States victory. As to the latter, the thing rested on what Riggs will do.

Up To Riggs. As the defense opened this afternoon Riggs, our No. 1 man, was pitted against Bromwich, similarly banked by Australia, and if Riggs could manage somehow to win this one, then we conceivably could come through, according to astute, impartial observers. In other words, if Riggs can beat Bromwich he figures to take Quist, too, leaving it up to Parker in the other two singles or to Hunt and Kramer in doubles.

The other encounter on today's program placed Parker against Quist, with the doubles lineup for tomorrow to be announced later but with Hunt and Kramer against Bromwich and Quist the probable pairings. The remaining two singles matches will be played Monday, Riggs meeting Quist and Parker, Bromwich.

THE BEST FISH STORY

This summer comes from Frank Creasey of Oklahoma City. He caught in the Gulf of Mexico a fish that cried like a baby when he lifted it from the water, was bright red and blue, and had eight legs, each with a light that could turn itself on and off. And he has a picture of it.

Lou Ambers Rated As One of Ring's Iron Men

By Pat Robinson. NEW YORK, Sept. 2 — The ring has produced many examples of amazing endurance, remarkable ability to absorb punishment in unbelievable doses and mighty recuperative powers.

Under London prize ring rules men often fought for hours with bare knuckles and the wonder is that one could shadow box that long to say nothing of socking and getting socked.

Coming down to a later day we run into Joe Grimm whose name has become a synonym for absorbing punishment. Grimm couldn't fight a lick but he could and did take all the punches of some of the hardest wall-poppers the ring ever saw.

Opponents used to flatten poor Joe a hundred times but they couldn't knock him out. Probably no fighter ever hit harder than Bob Fitzsimmons and yet the terrible Cornishman couldn't stop Grimm. Bob slaughtered him. He slashed him to ribbons. He bounced him off the deck like a rubber ball and still Grimm kept getting up.

Bat Nelson was another of the same breed. The Durable Dane's pet boast always was "I ain't human." And, indeed, it seems he was correct. But just used to wade in blindly taking hundreds of punches just to land—one. He thought nothing of fighting 40 rounds and absorbing thousands of punches under a blazing sun. This was the more astonishing to the insiders who knew Bat's actual physical condition.

Reams have been written about the amazing endurance and recuperative powers of Henry Armstrong, who dropped the light weight title to Lou Ambers the other night.

Henry has been called a human windmill because of his peculiar style of milling. He is forever boring in, hands and feet always moving.

He is about as close to a perpetual motion machine as we've ever seen. He sops up punches like a sponge takes water. And after watching him whirl through 15 rounds at top speed one wonders if the track didn't lose a great marathon runner when Henry took to the ring.

Yes, reams have been written about Henry's iron frame but little about the man who beat him. We venture to say the ring never saw a more enduring little fellow than Ambers. He has been whirling through fights at all distances longer than Armstrong, moving just as fast, hitting just as often if not as hard, and taking just as much punishment.

Moreover, Lou probably has weathered more hard punching than Henry. Lou fought such great hitters as Tony Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarin when those boys were at their peak and survived without trouble.

Now here's a strange state of affairs. In ring circles they say Ambers can't punch and Lou himself make no claims to being a puncher. And yet invariably it's the other fellow and not Lou who is always cut up after the battle.

This is true whether Lou wins or loses. After his first and losing battle with Armstrong, it was the latter and no Lou who was all bunged up. And the same condition prevailed after their second meeting the other night.

It was the same after his fights with Canzoneri, McLarin and Pedro Montanez.

All this leads one to believe Lou hits harder than the fans realize. Certainly he must have been doing something more than patting them on the cheek to inflict long gasps, smashed lips, cut eyes, and battered noses on his opponents.

We think the fact is that Lou is, and always has been, a greatly underrated fighter.

OUT of the mothballs comes the lightweight crown Lou Ambers had put away after Henry Armstrong took it from him last year. But Lou's 135-pound champ again, by virtue of his victory over Hammering Henry in 15 rounds in New York.

WILLIAMS WINS "MAN OF WEEK" TITLE IN SPORT

By International News Service
Ted Williams — six-foot-three and 175 pounds—draws the little brass ring this week as the slugging rookie to hit the major leagues in many years.

Ball players call him another Babe Ruth in the making, and the records indicate they may be correct. Here he is—a boy only 20, playing his first year in the majors with the Red Sox—and hitting a nifty .314.

He already has driven in 117 runs—the true test of a hitter—to lead both leagues and the records do not disclose any other player who ever led one league, much less two, in his first year under the big tent.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 2—The final home stay of the Columbus Red Birds will be filled with special attractions supplementing the schedule of nine games against eastern clubs. Starting with a twin bill on Sunday against Toledo the Flock will face three neighboring rivals before ending the local season on Friday, Sept. 8.

Fireworks, band music, demonstrations of old time baseball and the introduction of former baseball stars will take place between the games of the double header.

One of the seraphim took a live coal with tongs from the altar and touched it to Isaiah's mouth, saying, "Thine iniquity is taken away."

Then Isaiah heard the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send?" and Isaiah answered: "Here am I; send me." (GOLDEN TEXT—Isaiah 6:8.)

P. H. Leffler of Ashville and George Heath of Circleville have just returned from a "little pleasure trip" as they call it, covering 4500 miles with the average miles traveled each day 222 and the lowest in any one day 76 and the most 363. Used 212 gallons of gas with a 20 mile average to the gallon. Mr. Leffler was chauffeur the whole way around. Mr. Heath acting as guide. Ran through but two red lights and didn't get arrested once. The states visited and passed through other than their own Ohio were Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia. And none, they said, came anywhere near up to "Good Old Ohio." They spent three weeks on this "little around the circle" trip and after a short rest up period wouldn't object to another one, World's Fair, maybe.

Word from White Cross hospital gave the condition of Mrs. John Sark, who underwent a major operation there more than a week ago, as "getting along fine". Grover Cline who has not been so good for a few days is reported as better and hopes to be well enough to attend the Cline reunion Sunday.

Why not develop some real ball players here?

FEDERAL JAILS ARE FULL

PORTLAND, Ore. — Federal prisons are full and the number of federal prisoners is increasing at the rate of 1,800 a year, F. Lovell Bixby, chief of the probation-parole system of the bureau of prisons, declared while visiting the northwest. The fact that federal jurisdiction has been extended to cover many crimes not previously handled by the government and improved law enforcement accounts for the increase in prisoners.

The ball playing kiddy team came home from the County seat Friday evening all elated and happy over their having trimmed the Williamsport team in a 5 to 3 score. And it's the Worlds Series here in the county we're into now and are sure to win, the youngsters told us. A friendly criticism we are making. Why play "soft" ball? Why not develop some real ball players here?

Steve Cook now has charge of the boys' activities at the park playgrounds. Mr. Ward being absent at American Legion camp. He tells they have some very interesting ball games, the West pitted against the East side youngsters. And when we get in for umpire the Westsiders are licked. But hayfever is not so good for umpires right now.

NORMAL BUSINESS?

ROGER BABSON says business is up to normal, and people who say it's terrible are suffering from a defeatist complex. Some of the other commentators think Roger is going Pollyanna and is not to be taken seriously. The difficulties are with the word "normal" and with the temperaments of the commentators.

Some people think everything's fine if they have bread and tea and a bed to sleep in. Others think everything's terrible unless they can maintain three houses and a big yacht.

Business, actually, isn't quite so satisfactory as the optimists would have us think. But it's far from being so bad as the pessimists complain. It's better, on the whole, than last year, far better than in some years we'd rather forget, and it seems to be on a gradual way up.

But every fellow's business remains, as always in America, to a large extent in that fellow's own hands. If he thinks it's fairly good, and could be better, he will probably work to make it so. By doing his day's work thoroughly and well, he helps all business. By skimping, he gyps all business. No man stands alone. If all men work with a will to make things better, the forces of depression will have to give way. If they all lie down and wail, they will get what they expect and deserve.

There is still a vast reservoir of unemployed. Many of them may never get work again. This group must somehow be cared for on a fairly permanent basis. Foresight must be exercised to prevent the creation of a new idle group.

Meanwhile business is sitting up today, thank you, feeling better and clamoring for nourishment.

GUESSING ABOUT HITLER

SPECULATION as to what Hitler will do next has become almost a parlor game. Everybody does it. No two guesses seem to be quite the same, but all end with his departure from power followed by better days for Germany. Here are a few heard last week.

One man said: "Poland can't fight long. It will fall. What else can it do? Germany will then extend to the Russian border. Hitler will get Hungary next, then Rumania. By spring he will forget his friendship with Russia, the pact will be a scrap of paper and he will go into the Ukraine. Then Russia will fight and the rest of the world can sit back and watch the Nazis and the Bolsheviks kill each other off. Both countries will stand it just so long and then there will be revolutions. I can't think what form of government Russia will have next, but there will be a republic in Germany, the real Germans will take over, and Germany will begin

Up wearily and thinking about war in Europe. That appears to be all anyone thinks about these days. At least that is the only topic of conversation. And everyone has a different opinion as to the possible length of the war and its outcome. The vast majority, however, oppose Hitler. That is okay with me so long as our opposition is entirely mental and our support of the allies only moral. My sincerest personal prayer right now is that I don't grow angry enough to play an actual part. Lord, deliver me from that. And all other Americans as well.

I heard a soft sobbing and turned to look. There she stood under a great tree in the very early morning sunlight. Newsboys were running past screaming news of war. "Is it true?" she asked and I told her that Germany had invaded Poland and that the action might be the flare that would ignite world hatred and murderous insanity. She turned from me a moment, looked back with tears streaming down her face and said: "My poor boy is just 21 years old." There was the personification of world motherhood. Right here in our village. Who wants war anyway? Certainly not the millions of fathers and mothers who would suffer more than any youth in the front line. Certainly not those who were first-hand acquaintances of the 1914-1918 tragedy. Certainly not the eligible fighting man of this or any other land if he has the least idea of what war is all about.

Yes, we all talk war now, think war. We will do so for months and probably years to come. Please, God, let us not see the so-called glory of killing our fellow man. Please let us see only the filth and tragedy of war.

In the evening I tuned the short wave radio to stations in Rome, Berlin and London, listening in on news of the war.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN.

JOHNSON AS WAR SECRETARY

WASHINGTON—Franklin Roosevelt will go down in history as one of the most idealistic Presidents, but with a positive genius for picking second-rate personalities.

Proof of that appraisal is his Cabinet during the current crisis. With the exception of three or four members, the men who sit around the Cabinet table are moribund. No inspiration comes from them, and nowhere is this more true than in the two military branches of the government.

The Navy today lacks a Secretary, and double-duty has broken the health of its Assistant Secretary, Charles Edison. Due to the personal attention Roosevelt has given the Navy, however, it is far better off than the Army. Morale within the latter is low, and recent maneuvers have shown the results of a divided command at the top.

For during the past two years, the War Department has been torn between two masters: Harry Woodring, the mediocre, pudgy little Secretary, and Colonel Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary and the man who really runs the department.

WAR DEPARTMENT THEATRICALS

This confused command results from just two things: political luck and the tender heart of Franklin Roosevelt. Harry Woodring, lame duck Governor of Kansas, became Assistant Secretary of War when the late Pat Malloy of Oklahoma turned down the job. Then he became acting Secretary of War when George Dern died. And Roosevelt, being fond of Harry and an admirer of his vivacious, socially adept young wife, couldn't bear to turn him out of a job in which he was having the time of his life.

In any efficient Cabinet, however, the welfare of the Army comes ahead of personal enjoyment, and the President belatedly has come to realize that—even though it took the threat of world war to convince him.

New Secretary of War at last is going to be Colonel Louis Johnson, boyish, 48-year-old West Virginia, who for two years has done the chief chores in the War Department and executed one of the most important jobs of war preparedness—the military mobilization of industry.

Mobilization of industry is something which the War Department has talked about for years. Skeleton plans have been drawn up, industrial leaders have been consulted, laws have been proposed in Congress.

the long, hard road back to civilization and culture."

Another view: "The Poles will fight, and die fighting. Poland will never amount to much again as a nation. Too much good blood flowing over the fields. Before France and England on one side and Germany on the other can come to a decision, there will be a German revolution. Hitler's crowd will meet the fate they deserve, the real Germans will take over, beginning, as you say, that long hard road back."

What Can Harm An Unborn Child?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

FROM Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, comes the suggestion that an article should appear on what the expectant mother should and should not believe.

"My wife," the man writes, "is an expectant mother and would like to see a dentist and have her teeth filled. She would also like to get a permanent wave, but being an expectant mother she is afraid that it might have some effect on her unborn child. Can you tell us if her fears have any grounds?

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

"There is so much talk going around, based on superstition, ignorance and bits of facts, that one does not quite know what to believe."

That last paragraph appeals to your sympathy. I do not know why, in a modern day and age, the neighbors would take the responsibility of volunteering to make the decision of giving advice either pro or con about such matters.

"Delicate Condition"

Especially under the circumstances, there is an old saying about "a woman in a delicate condition." Like all old sayings—old sayings that survive—it is packed with truth. An expectant mother is in a delicate condition. She looks forward to a gradual development of bodily changes and to a finale that at best is no fun. After that she assumes a great responsibility—the rearing of a human being, which in this day and period is no light matter.

Then at this exact moment the neighbors take it on themselves to barge in and relate "bits of facts" about some limited experience each has had.

There is one neighbor, though, that could be depended on to give some pretty good advice. The advice is good because it is based on experience; also because it is based on a complete understanding of the situation—meaning a thorough examination. The neighbor I refer to is your doctor.

Get Teeth Filled

But to get down to the particular questions asked here. Of course the teeth should be filled. Your dentist can be depended on to advise you about that, and he has just as much responsibility as your doctor not to deal out superstitions in "bits of facts." Pregnancy makes inroads on the teeth. Consider the old saying, "for every child a tooth."

It meant that the growing child has to have calcium, and Nature takes calcium where she can find it. If it is not provided in the food, she attacks the teeth. Attention to the teeth is one of the primary items of pre-natal care.

As to the permanent wave, this is a matter that can be left to the discretion. It certainly won't hurt the unborn child—that point should be made very definitely. Personally I am in favor of it. It has a spiritual value; it cheers the expectant mother. She looks much better, at least from the neck up. So this improves her morale. And from the standpoint of a mere male I think morale in this situation is very important. In fact, I will go a little farther and say that, in my opinion, an expectant mother should have a permanent wave once a week for the duration.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. S. H.: "I have been advised by my doctor to take vitamin B, but find it hard to digest."

Answer—Vitamin B should be difficult to digest. Milk, eggs, oatmeal and many fruits and vegetables contain it. These are not indigestible.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

"YOU BETTER let me break the trail," Shot Rogers whispered. "Just stay right behind me and step in my tracks."

"Don't take long steps," she answered. "Your legs are awful long."

"Me and Abe Lincoln," said he. "I think you are like Abraham Lincoln in many ways, Shot. Really I do."

"We can't get to talking that way, Lorena! Not now. If we are going to do this crazy business, we got to keep our minds strictly on what we are doing!"

"Who was it mentioned 'me and Abe Lincoln,' Mr. Rogers? Who started it?"

"Aw! He squeezed her arm a little, and she laughed softly at him. But he swung out quietly and she walked behind."

He had a pack strapped to his shoulders that made him look hump-backed in the night. Part of it was hers; he wouldn't let her carry much. And he kept looking back as they walked along, treading between rocks, pushing aside the thorny brush on the mountain mesa there, wading in the highland grasses that had sprung up in spring, but which were mostly dry now. The recent rain had revived some of the grasses, but the summer sun had been devastating again. Shot's trained eye took note of these details even at night, and in spite of the more urgent matter at hand.

"Shot, do you have a definite goal in mind?" she asked when they had sat down to rest a bit, after the first half hour. "Are you going to a specific place now?"

"Depends on the lay of the land over there. Maybe we can hole in somewhere near the waterfall or the rapids, on one branch or the other of the Ghost. I think maybe that's the best place to keep a lookout."

"What about the cattle herds themselves? Maybe we could watch them and learn more."

"Well, I figure it this way, little girl. He called her that quite unconsciously, in a friendliness and intimacy which he had never permitted himself to show before, which delighted Lorena. "We might watch the cows and see the rustlers start off with some stolen stock, all right. But we couldn't follow to see where they'd go. That's what we need to know—where the cows go. We know that several times they have been driven right to the stream bed, and then they disappeared. So let's stick near the stream and see what we can see."

"I'm not afraid, Shot."

"No need to be, much. Not much danger if we just peek out from the rocks all day and look. If we move around we might be seen, but we got on clothes that'll camouflage in the rocks and brush easy. Then we can trek back tonight. Our trouble'll be pacifying the Brazees. And Mister Dale."

"No, said Lorena."

"Shot Rogers, I declare!" Lorena unconsciously picked her Aunt Sally's expression. "You talk as if I were a child. Jerry Dale has no strings on me. He's not my guardian."

Dawn had begun splitting the dome of night.

"He acts like it."

"Well—well, maybe he does, then. Maybe I like for him to!"

"Um," said Shot. "We got to stay together all day. Hardly worth while—starting off with a scrap."

He led off at a fast walk again, and she clung behind him. She told him she felt like an Indian squaw. "Squaws are fat," he whispered back, out of a corner of his mouth.

She didn't answer, but she was delighted. Delighted because Shot Rogers had a sense of humor. Delighted because the night was cool and zestful, especially at this altitude. Delighted because she was adventuring and enjoying the adventure as only a young and audacious person can. Delighted because—well, just because.

She wouldn't phrase everything even in her own heart. Sometimes she was afraid to admit too much to herself. Fate had a way of snatching things away from people who were too cocksure, Lorena knew. She had seen it, experienced it even. She didn't want to make any mistakes now.

As she walked she could look off at a night-sea of mountain peaks and canyons, topped by a velvet to which were sewn gems of stars. Somehow she just couldn't associate all this with danger. If she had been alone she would have been ill at ease, perhaps even afraid in view of the recent troubles. But with Shot she wasn't afraid of anything. Even Luis Escobar seemed remote, unimportant.

She wished for a moment that she could see some of her friends back in Kentucky. Glorious, they would never believe her when she got back home! Never believe the true stories she'd have to tell. For that matter, she could hardly believe them herself. So many things had happened to her; so many seemingly impossible things—glory, Arizona was an adventure country by reputation, but she thought that was all due to fiction and the theater screens. She had been prepared for this summer, but not for anything as reckless and exciting as the experiences she was having on Phantom ranch.

Shot moved fast to conserve the night hours, and she was tired when they came out on a promontory far from any land she had seen before.

"Unless I've gotten all twisted around," he whispered, "the forks of the Ghost can be seen, in daylight, right down yonder less than two miles. I sort of spotted this high point when I was there, even though I never thought then about coming up here. Now, when daylight comes, we can see clear down there. You got the field glasses you mentioned? They're Dale's, aren't they?"

"Unh huh. I snatched them out of his room."

"Well, Well, all right. They'll come in handy, maybe. Best thing we can learn is which fork of the river they do take, when they drive cows away. Then we can concentrate on seeing where the cows come out of the water."

"They opened his pack and ate a sandwich each, some dried figs, and half a bar of candy, then drank from his canteen. Dawn had begun splitting the dome of night, streaking through some low-lying clouds. They knew daylight would come quickly up where there were no canyon walls to delay it. Already they could tell that their promontory afforded a spectacular lookout even though the lowlands as yet were shrouded in purplish gloom.

"It's going to be a pretty day; no rain, thank goodness," Shot decided, eyeing the sky.

"That's good, Shot. But we won't have much to do, will we? Just sit and look. We can't move around or we might be seen, you said."

"That's right. Just be still."

"Well," she said slowly. "I don't mind. But you are used to action. You have a great deal of energy. Don't you, Shot? It will be awful boring for you to have to sit behind a rock for 12 or 14 hours."

Shot looked into her blue eyes. Her blue eyes, under the brown of her hair, had disturbed him from the moment he first saw her that day in the Blanco station. He was rather close to her now, and she saw him swallow hard.

"Little girl," he began, "if it was 12 or 14 years, I wouldn't." He paused and swallowed again.

"Hmhm!"

"Shucks, Lorena. I got to lay for Luis Escobar! Don't git my mind off my business!"

That is ok with me so long as our opposition is entirely mental and our support of the allies only moral. My sincerest personal prayer right now is that I don't grow angry enough to play an actual part. Lord, deliver me from that. And all other Americans as well.

I heard a soft sobbing and turned to look. There she stood under a great tree in the very early morning sunlight. Newsboys were running past screaming news of war. "Is it true?" she asked and I told her that Germany had invaded Poland and that the action might be the flare that would ignite world hatred and murderous insanity. She turned from me a moment, looked back with tears streaming down her face and said: "My poor boy is just 21 years old." There was the personification of world motherhood. Right here in our village. Who wants war anyway? Certainly not the millions of fathers and mothers who would suffer more than any youth in the front line. Certainly not those who were first-hand acquaintances of the 1914-1918 tragedy. Certainly not the eligible fighting man of this or any other land if he has the least idea of what war is all about.

Yes, we all talk war now, think war. We will do so for months and probably years to come. Please, God, let us not see the so-called glory of killing our fellow man. Please let us see only the filth and tragedy of war.

In the evening I tuned the short wave radio to stations in Rome, Berlin and London, listening in on news of the war.

Later I heard rebroadcasts from Warsaw and Paris. I wish as complete a picture of European events as possible, both sides of the picture, all charges, all claims. As I sat listening I could not help but think of the situation of German citizens. Listening in on broadcasts from foreign lands is prohibited, punishable by prison sentence. Repeating information learned by shortwave from outside Germany means facing a firing squad.

Don't under any circumstance believe all you read in dispatches from Europe. Don't believe all you hear over the radio. Master minds already are spreading propaganda intended to win your sympathy, to stir you to war pitch. Be as smart as the propagandists and take all their offerings, from both sides with a generous helping of salt. My sympathy is strongly with Poland, England and France. But it is not strong enough to create desire to enter into their war. May it never become that strong.

JOHNSON AS WAR SECRETARY

WASHINGTON—Franklin Roosevelt will go down in history as one of the most idealistic Presidents, but with a positive genius for picking second-rate personalities.

Proof of that appraisal is his Cabinet during the current crisis. With the exception of three or four members, the men who sit around the Cabinet table are moribund. No inspiration comes from them, and nowhere is this more true than in the two military branches of the government.

The Navy today lacks a Secretary, and double-duty has broken the health of its Assistant Secretary, Charles Edison. Due to the personal attention Roosevelt has given the Navy, however, it is far better off than the Army. Morale within the latter is low, and recent maneuvers have shown the results of a divided command at the top.

For during the past two years, the War Department has been torn between two masters: Harry Woodring, the mediocre, pudgy little Secretary, and Colonel Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary and the man who really runs the department.

WAR DEPARTMENT THEATRICALS

This confused command results from just two things: political luck and the tender heart of Franklin Roosevelt. Harry Woodring, lame duck Governor of Kansas, became Assistant Secretary of War when the late Pat Malloy of Oklahoma turned down the job. Then he became acting Secretary of War when George Dern died. And Roosevelt, being fond of Harry and an admirer of his vivacious, socially adept young wife, couldn't bear to turn him out of a job in which he was having the time of his life.

In any efficient Cabinet, however, the welfare of the Army comes ahead of personal enjoyment, and the President belatedly has come to realize that—even though it took the threat of world war to convince him.

New Secretary of War at last is going to be Colonel Louis Johnson, boyish, 48-year-old West Virginia, who for two years has done the chief chores in the War Department and executed one of the most important jobs of war preparedness—the military mobilization of industry.

Mobilization of industry is something which the War Department has talked about for years. Skeleton plans have been drawn up, industrial leaders have been consulted, laws have been proposed in Congress.

the long, hard road back to civilization and culture."

Another view: "The Poles will fight, and die fighting. Poland will never amount to much again as a nation. Too much good blood flowing over the fields. Before France and England on one side and Germany on the other can come to a decision, there will be a German revolution. Hitler's crowd will meet the fate they deserve, the real Germans will take over, beginning, as you say, that long hard road back."

What Can Harm An Unborn Child?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

FROM Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, comes the suggestion that an article should appear on what the expectant mother should and should not believe.

"My wife," the man writes, "is an expectant mother and would like to see a dentist and have her teeth filled. She would also like to get a permanent wave, but being an expectant mother she is afraid that it might have some effect on her unborn child. Can you tell us if her fears have any grounds?

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

"There is so much talk going around, based on superstition, ignorance and bits of facts, that one does not quite know what to believe."

That last paragraph appeals to your sympathy. I do not know why, in a modern day and age, the neighbors would take the responsibility of volunteering to make the decision of giving advice either pro or con about such matters.

"Delicate Condition"

Especially under the circumstances, there is an old saying about "a woman in a delicate condition." Like all old sayings—old sayings that survive—it is packed with truth. An expectant mother is in a delicate condition. She looks forward to a gradual development of bodily changes and to a finale that at best is no fun. After that she assumes a great responsibility the rearing of a human being, which in this day and period is no light matter.

Then at this exact moment the neighbors take it on themselves to barge in and relate "bits of facts" about some limited experience each has had.

There is one neighbor, though, that could be depended on to give some pretty good advice. The advice is good because it is based on experience; also because it is based on a complete understanding of the situation—meaning a thorough examination. The neighbor I refer to is your doctor.

Get Teeth Filled

But to get down to the particular questions asked here. Of course the teeth should be filled. Your dentist can be depended on to advise you about that, and he has just as much responsibility as your doctor not to deal out superstitions in "bits of facts." Pregnancy makes inroads on the teeth. Consider the old saying, "for every child a tooth."

It meant that the growing child has to have calcium, and Nature takes calcium where she can find it. If it is not provided in the food, she attacks the teeth. Attention to the teeth is one of the primary items of pre-natal care.

As to the permanent wave, this is a matter that can be left to the discretion. It certainly won't hurt the unborn child—that point should be made very definitely. Personally I am in favor of it. It has a spiritual value; it cheers the expectant mother. She looks much better, at least from the neck up. So this improves her morale. And from the standpoint of a mere male I think morale in this situation is very important.

In fact, I will go a little farther and say that, in my opinion, an expectant mother should have a permanent wave once a week for the duration.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. S. H.: "I have been advised by my doctor to take vitamin B, but find it hard to digest."

Answer—Vitamin B should be difficult to digest. Milk, eggs oatmeal and many fruits and vegetables contain it. These are not indigestible.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

"YOU BETTER let me break the trail," Shot Rogers whispered. "Just stay right behind me and step in my tracks."

"Don't take long steps," she answered. "Your legs are awful long."

"Me and Abe Lincoln," said he. "I think you are like Abraham Lincoln in many ways, Shot. Really I do."

"We can't get to talking that way, Lorena! Not now. If we are going to do this crazy business, we got to keep our minds strictly on what we are doing!"

"Who was it mentioned 'me and Abe Lincoln,' Mr. Rogers? Who started it?"

"Aw! He squeezed her arm a little, and she laughed softly at him. But he swung out quietly and she walked behind."

He had a pack strapped to his shoulders that made him look hump-backed in the night. Part of it was hers; he wouldn't let her carry much. And he kept looking back as they walked along, treading the thorny brush on the mountain mesa there, wading in the highland grasses that had sprung up in spring, but which were mostly dry now. The recent rain had revived some of the grasses, but the summer sun had been devastating again. Shot's trained eye took note of these details even at night, and in spite of the more urgent matter at hand.

"Shot, do you have a definite goal in mind?" she asked when they had sat down to rest a bit, after the first half hour. "Are you going to a specific place now?"

"Depends on the lay of the land over there. Maybe we can hole in somewhere near the waterfall or the rapids, on one branch or the other of the Ghost. I think maybe that's the best place to keep a lookout."

"What about the cattle herds themselves? Maybe we could watch them and learn more."

"Well, I figure it this way, little girl." He called her that quite un-ctimely in a friendliness and intimacy which he had never permitted himself to show before, which delighted Lorena. "We might watch the cows and see the rustlers start off with some stolen stock, all right. But we couldn't follow to see where they'd go. That's what we need to know—where the cows go. We know that several times they have been driven right to the stream bed, and then they disappeared. So let's stick near the stream and see what we can see."

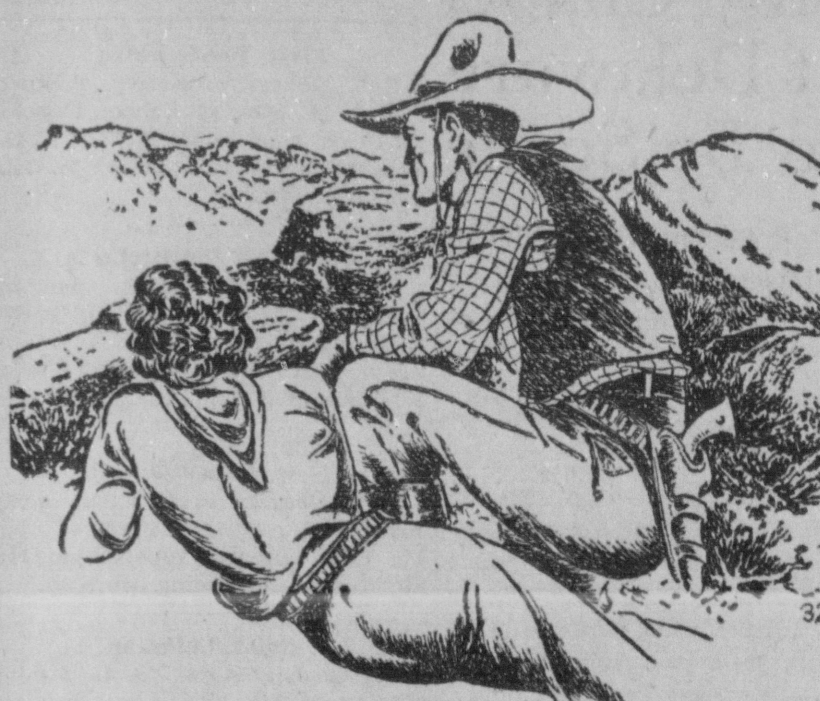

"I'm not afraid, Shot."

"No need to be, much. Not much danger if we just peek out from the rocks all day and look. If we move around we might be seen, but we got on clothes that'll camouflage in the rocks and brush easy. Then we can trek back tonight. Our trouble'll be pacifying the Brazees. And Mister Dale."

"No, said Lorena.

"Why won't it?"

"Shot Rogers, I declare!" Lorena unconsciously picked her Aunt Sally's expression. "You talk as if I were a child. Jerry Dale has no strings on me. He's not my guardian."

Dawn had begun splitting the dome of night.

"He acts like it."

"Well—well, maybe he does, then. Maybe I like for him to."

"Um," said Shot. "We got to stay together all day. Hardly worth while—uh—starting off with a scrap."

He led off at a fast walk again, and she clung behind him. She told him she felt like an Indian squaw. "Squaws are fat," he whispered back, out of a corner of his mouth. She didn't answer, but she was delighted. Delighted because Shot Rogers had a sense of humor. Delighted because the night was cool and zestful, especially at this altitude. Delighted because she was adventuring and enjoying the adventure as only a young and audacious person can. Delighted because—well, just because.

She wouldn't phrase everything even in her own heart. Sometimes she was afraid to admit too much to herself. Fate had a way of snatching things away from people who were too cocksure, Lorena knew. She had seen it, experienced it even. She didn't want to make any mistakes now.

As she walked she could look off at a night-scape of mountain peaks and canyons, topped by a velvet to which were seven gems of stars. Somehow she just couldn't associate all this with danger. If she had been alone she would have been ill at ease, perhaps even afraid in view of the recent troubles. But with Shot she wasn't afraid of anything. Even Luis Escobar seemed remote, unimportant.

She wished for a moment that she could see some of her friends back in Kentucky. Glorree, they would never believe her when she got back home! Never believe the true stories she'd have to tell. For that matter, she could hardly believe them herself. So many things had happened to her; so many seemingly impossible things—glory, Arizona was an adventure country by reputation, but she thought that was all due to fiction and the theater screens. She had been prepared for fun this summer, but not for anything as reckless and exciting as the experiences she was having on Phantom ranch.

Shot moved fast to conserve the night hours, and she was tired when they came out on a promontory far from any land she had seen before.

"Unless I've gotten all twisted around," he whispered, "the forks of the Ghost can be seen, in daylight, right down yonder less than two miles. I sort of spotted this high point when I was there, even though I never thought then about coming up here. Now, when daylight comes, we can see clear down there. You got the field glasses you mentioned? They're Dale's, aren't they?"

"Uh-huh. I snatched them out of his room."

"Well. Well, all right. They'll come in handy, maybe. Best thing we can learn is which fork of the river they do take, when they drive cows away. Then we can concentrate on seeing where the cows come out of the water."

"They opened his pack and ate a sandwich each, some dried figs, and half a bar of candy, then drank from his canteen. Dawn had begun splitting the dome of night, streaking through some low-lying clouds. They knew daylight would come quickly up where there were no canyon walls to delay it. Already they could tell that their promontory afforded a spectacular lookout over though the lowlands as yet were shrouded in purplish gloom.

"It's going to be a pretty day; no rain, thank goodness," Shot decided, eying the sky.

"That's good, Shot. But we won't have much to do, will we? Just sit and look. We can't move around or we might be seen, you said."

"That's right. Just be still."

"Well," she said slowly. "I don't mind. But you are used to action. You have a great deal of energy. Don't you, Shot? It will be awful boring for you to have to sit behind a rock for 12 or 14 hours."

Shot looked into her blue eyes. Her blue eyes, under the brown of her hair, had disturbed him from the moment he first saw her that day in the Blanco station. He was rather close to her now, and she saw him swallow hard.

"Little girl," he began, "if it was 12 or 14 years, I wouldn't—" He paused and swallowed again.

"Hmmm!"

"Shucks, Lorena. I got to lay for Luis Escobar! Don't git my mind off my business!"

Pickaway Garden Club Hears Hamlins Speak

Spring Planting Discussed By Professor

Howard Hamlin of the State Department of Education, Columbus, and Mrs. Hamlin were guest speakers Friday evening when the Pickaway County Garden Club met at 7:30 P. M. in the home of Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, West Union Street, for the first meeting of the season. Mr. Hamlin talked on "Bulbs for the Spring Garden" and illustrated his talk with slides of pictures in color of his own garden in Upper Arlington and those of his neighbors, including that of Victor Ries, whose garden adjoins.

He discussed the choice of bulbs for continuous bloom, told of the best places to buy healthy bulbs of good quality, mentioning that the embargo on narcissus bulbs from Europe had been raised. He said that bulbs could be purchased as cheaply in Holland as in the United States as the growers pay the express and the duty. He urges early buying and planting before the bulbs dry. Stressing the need for preparing the plant beds properly, he told in detail of the various steps, and also spoke of the need of fertilizing the plants as the blossoms appear in the early spring. He discussed the pictures as they were shown on the screen urging the need for proper background for beautiful bulb gardens.

Before he opened his talk on bulbs he exhibited a specimen and told the peculiarities of the Marjuna plant. He said this part of the talk was to acquaint the public with the plant so that it could be detected and destroyed when growing in fields and vacant city lots. He said that six acres of the plant, which is properly known as the Mexican Hemp, had been found growing on the grounds of Antioch College. He said that it had been planted by persons unknown and was found by chance as the grounds include 600 acres.

Mr. Hamlin said that the plant has been found under cultivation in Cleveland and Toledo and many northern counties. It has come into use as a narcotic during the last eight years before that being grown for its fiber. Used by physicians as a drug, it has been improperly used as a narcotic by persons mostly of high school and college ages.

Mrs. Hamlin spoke briefly of the flower exhibit at the State Fair of which she had charge. She mentioned the Upper Arlington Flower Show which will be Monday and Tuesday and the Northern Clubs' Flower Show, which will be September 9 and 10 at the Archeological Museum, Columbus. She invited the members of the garden club to both. She also announced the State Flower Show which will be September 12 and 13 at Lima.

Mrs. Hunsicker was in charge of the meeting and received the reports of Mrs. G. G. Campbell, secretary. She also read the report of the treasurer. After routine business was transacted, Mrs. Elmer Stebelton was announced as a new member.

Mrs. Howard Jones told the highlights of the recent Gladioli Show at her home. Mrs. Hunsicker called attention of the members to the large bouquets of choice gladioli which had been brought

The dancing began at 10 P. M. continuing until 1 o'clock. Several visitors from out of town were present including, Miss Suzanne Radcliffe and Dick Radcliffe of Washington, D. C. and Miss Mary Elizabeth Snyder of Kingstree. Other guests from Circleville joined the class for the pleasant evening.

Pickaway Garden Club Hears Hamlins Speak

Spring Planting Discussed By Professor

Howard Hamlin of the State Department of Education, Columbus, and Mrs. Hamlin were guest speakers Friday evening when the Pickaway County Garden Club met at 7:30 P. M. in the home of Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker, West Union Street, for the first meeting of the season. Mr. Hamlin talked on "Bulbs for the Spring Garden" and illustrated his talk with slides of pictures in color of his own garden in Upper Arlington and those of his neighbors, including that of Victor Ries, whose garden adjoins.

He discussed the choice of bulbs for continuous bloom, told of the best places to buy healthy bulbs of good quality, mentioning that the embargo on narcissus bulbs from Europe had been raised. He said that bulbs could be purchased as cheaply in Holland as in the United States as the growers pay the express and the duty. He urges early buying and planting before the bulbs dry. Stressing the need for preparing the plant beds properly, he told in detail of the various steps, and also spoke of the need of fertilizing the plants as the blossoms appear in the early spring. He discussed the pictures as they were shown on the screen urging the need for proper background for beautiful bulb gardens.

Before he opened his talk on bulbs he exhibited a specimen and told the peculiarities of the Marjuna plant. He said this part of the talk was to acquaint the public with the plant so that it could be detected and destroyed when growing in fields and vacant city lots. He said that six acres of the plant, which is properly known as the Mexican Hemp, had been found growing on the grounds of Antioch College. He said that it had been planted by persons unknown and was found by chance as the grounds include 600 acres.

Mr. Hamlin said that the plant has been found under cultivation in Cleveland and Toledo and many northern counties. It has come into use as a narcotic during the last eight years before that being grown for its fiber. Used by physicians as a drug, it has been improperly used as a narcotic by persons mostly of high school and college ages.

Mrs. Hamlin spoke briefly of the flower exhibit at the State Fair of which she had charge. She mentioned the Upper Arlington Flower Show which will be Monday and Tuesday and the North ern Clubs' Flower Show, which will be September 9 and 10 at the Archeological Museum, Columbus. She invited the members of the garden club to both. She also announced the State Flower Show which will be September 12 and 13 at Lima.

Mrs. Hunsicker was in charge of the meeting and received the reports of Mrs. G. G. Campbell, secretary. She also read the report of the treasurer. After routine business was transacted, Mrs. Elmer Stebelton was announced as a new member.

Mrs. Howard Jones told the highlights of the recent Gladioli Show at her home. Mrs. Hunsicker called attention of the members to the large bouquets of choice gladioli which had been brought Alaska sealskin is also among the best all-purpose furs, looking as smart after dark as at the stadium, and as appropriate with dress as with sports clothes. It comes in black as well as rich brown, the latter blending with other brown tones of the season and flattering all complexions. and stick-to-it-iveness, partly by convincing industry that its formulas and trade secrets would be safeguarded. Johnson even staked a knockdown fight with Homer Cummings, then Attorney General, to prevent secrets given the Army by the Aluminum Corporation from being subpoenaed for the anti-trust investigation. Johnson figured that if these secrets were relinquished, no other company would cooperate with the Army. Like a lot of other things in life, Johnson's entry into politics was sheer coincidence. Graduated in law from the University of Virginia, he decided to practice in a town in which he was a complete stranger, and went to Clarksburg, W. Va., in 1912. At the time of his arrival, a local sheriff had been arrested for embezzlement, and a young lawyer was needed to act as prosecutor.

Johnson took the job, fought the case up to the Supreme Court, and as a result of the publicity, ran for Mayor of Clarksburg. This was just two years after coming to live in West Virginia. Johnson lost the mayoralty race by about 50 votes, but shortly thereafter was elected to the state legislature and became Democratic leader of the house.

The first world war came. Johnson was mustered out as a captain of the 80th Infantry Division, and on the day he retired, he had the nerve to write a letter to the Chief of Staff telling him how to reform the Army. Now Louis will soon have the opportunity to put his reforms into practice.

BORN ORATOR

When Louis Johnson was a youngster at the University of Virginia, he was a champion orator and won membership in the honorary public speaking fraternity, Delta Sigma Rho. Oratory has stood him in good stead since. It helped him establish a $40,000 yearly law practice in Clarksburg. It helped him become commander of the American Legion in 1932. And it helped him soothe the American Legion convention in 1933 when it was about to insult Roosevelt for cutting veterans' benefit payments.

It was this facile rescue work which put Louis Johnson in the War Department. And even here oratory stands him in good stead, for he has become the foremost speech-maker of the New Deal, having delivered 175 talks in two years, and flown 100,000 miles to make them.

Johnson is one of the friendliest executives in the New Deal, but not all Army officers like him. He is too forthright in cutting red tape, too ruthless in treading on Army protocol. One day he decided that too many enlisted men were serving as flunkies to officers, so he had them better spend their time training to fight. As a result hundreds of officers suddenly found themselves without orderlies.

Another of Johnson's pet reforms is to lop off the top-heavy lists of officers in the Army, retire them by competitive examination. Big, genial, and quietspoken, Johnson works long, late hours, and smokes a pipe as long as he works. But no one could ever tell how hard he works, for he never shows any sign of nervousness. He wastes no energy fretting, and even his mad speaking dashes about the country seem to rest him.

Real fact is that as Secretary of War Johnson will fit into a groove which already he has virtually made for himself. Only noticeable change will be that Johnson will move his office and will be titular as well as actual boss of the Army.

MILITARY MERRY-GO-ROUND

Louis Johnson is a Main Street in fact as well as habit. His law office is on Main Street, Clarksburg... A great joiner, Johnson belongs to Delta Chi, Raven, Masons, Elks, Rotary, and others... In making speeches, Johnson writes out the text in advance, gets it thoroughly in his mind and then speaks without notes... Roosevelt originally thought of putting Attorney General Frank Murphy in the War Department, but finds him increasingly invaluable in the Justice Department... Johnson is a close friend of Acting Secretary of Navy Edison. The two sometimes josh each other by exchanging home-made poetry... Woodring is slated to go to Canada as Minister to succeed Daniel Roper, who has already submitted his resignation.

TWO 4-H BOYS MAKE RECORDS BY CALF SALES

Two Pickaway County 4-H club members are proud of records made by their calves sold last week at the auction of the Pickaway Livestock Cooperative Association.

Harry J. Briggs, service manager of the Farm Bureau, announced Saturday that he had received word from the Falter Packing Company, Columbus, that an Angus calf weighing 1,190 pounds, sold by Eldon Boyssel, who resides on one of the government farms in Wayne Township, dressed out 61.92 percent.

Another calf sold by Philip Reichelderfer, Washington Township, dressed 60.2 percent. The sale weight was 1,040.

Mr. Briggs said the dressed weights of these calves were the highest he could remember for any ever sold by Pickaway County club members. Some farmers, he explained, have sold cattle that dressed 62 percent or better.

The boys purchased their calves last December and their records show remarkable gains. The calf raised by Boyssel was purchased of Mrs. S. C. Tootle, Five Points. The one raised by Reichelderfer was obtained from George List, Jackson Township.

COURT TO HEAR MOTION FOR DAMAGE SUIT TRIAL

The motion for a new trial in the suit of Melvin McIntosh, 1132 South Champion Avenue, Columbus, against Harold and D. A. Marshall, Stoutsville Route 1, will be heard by Judge Meeker Terwilliger in Common Pleas Court next Tuesday at 1 P. M.

A jury returned a verdict for the defendant on the plaintiff's petition for $2,500 damages and a verdict for the plaintiff on the defendant's cross petition for $200. The case involved a truck and auto accident on Route 56, about a half mile southeast of Circleville last Sept. 1. Mr. McIntosh asks the new trial.

SCHOOL DISPUTE MAY BE AIRED EARLY IN WEEK

Judge Reveals That Briefs Have Been Filed By Board And Muhlenberg Areas

Arguments in the Common Pleas court case involving the transfer of Muhlenberg Township School District will probably be heard by Judge Meeker Terwilliger next Wednesday.

The judge announced Saturday that briefs of both the Muhlenberg Township Board and the Pickaway County Board of Education have been submitted on the demurrer filed by counsel for the County Board attacking the petition of the Township Board. Judge Terwilliger said he would study the briefs during the week end and probably ask arguments on Wednesday.

The Township Board obtained a temporary injunction preventing the transfer of the school district to Monroe School District, stopping the payment of any funds derived from taxes in the Muhlenberg district to Monroe and forbidding the County Board from interfering with the operation of the school. It asked a permanent injunction. Since obtaining the injunction the Township Board has employed grade teachers and made arrangements to have the high school pupils sent to Jackson Township School.

The County Board transferred the Muhlenberg School District to Monroe District after the State Board of Education annulled the high school charter due to small enrollment.

The demurrer contends the petition does not state facts constituting a cause of action, that the Muhlenberg Board has no legal capacity to sue and that the court has no jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action.

SCHOOL DISPUTE MAY BE AIRED EARLY IN WEEK

Judge Reveals That Briefs
Have Been Filed By Board
And Muhlenberg Areas

Arguments in the Common Pleas court case involving the transfer of Muhlenberg Township School District will probably be heard by Judge Meeker Terwilliger next Wednesday.

The judge announced Saturday that briefs of both the Muhlenberg Township Board and the Pickaway County Board of Education have been submitted on the demurrer filed by counsel for the County Board attacking the petition of the Township Board. Judge Terwilliger said he would study the briefs during the week end and probably ask arguments on Wednesday.

The Township Board obtained a temporary injunction preventing the transfer of the school district to Monroe School District, stopping the payment of any funds derived from taxes in the Muhlenberg district to Monroe and forbidding the County Board from interfering with the operation of the school. It asked a permanent injunction. Since obtaining the injunction the Township Board has employed grade teachers and made arrangements to have the high school pupils sent to Jackson Township School.

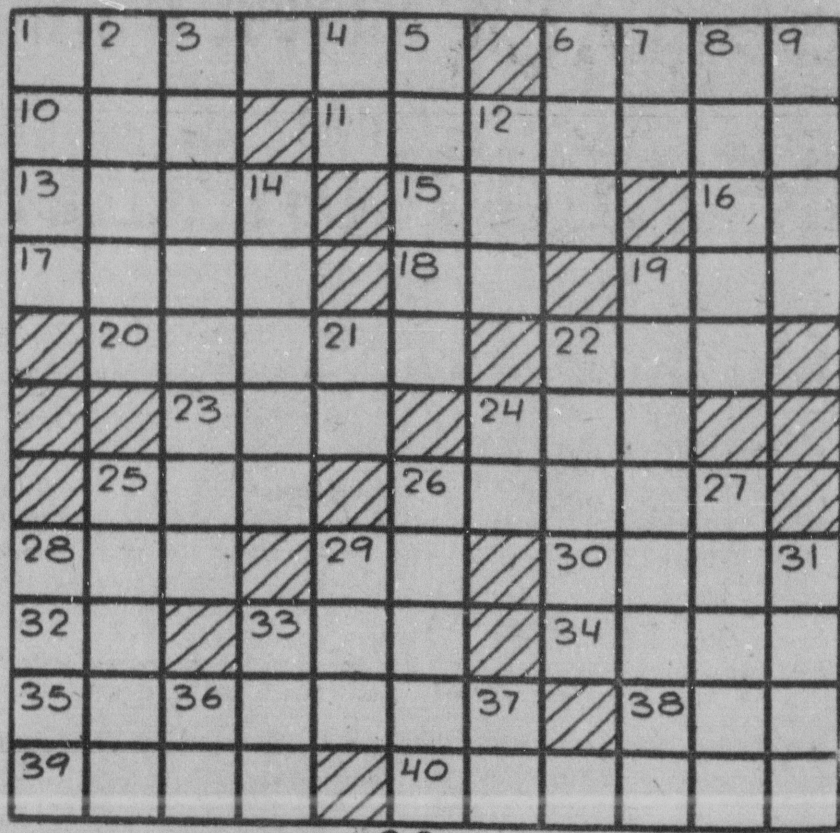

The County Board transferred the Muhlenberg School District to Monroe District after the State Board of Education annulled the high school charter due to small enrollment.

The demurrer contends the petition does not state facts constituting a cause of action, that the Muhlenberg Board has no legal capacity to sue and that the court has no jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action.

MEDICAL SOCIETY ASKS $20,000 BOND ISSUE FOR HOSPITAL ADDITION

DOCTORS SEEK COUNCIL'S AID FOR STRUCTURE

Need For More Bed Room And Maternity Space Being Stressed

RESOLUTION IS ADOPTED

Vote Of Citizens May Be Necessary To Provide Money For Work

The Pickaway County Medical Society adopted a resolution Friday to be submitted to council asking a $20,000 bond issue for an addition to Berger Hospital.

The resolution urges that council "take immediate steps looking to the passage of a bond issue for $20,000 for the purpose of remodeling and adding to Berger Hospital that more bed capacity may be had and that better maternity care may be furnished."

The resolution explains that during the last year it has been demonstrated that the present bed capacity of the hospital is inadequate to care for the care of the normal sick and injured of the community. It points out that each year since the opening of the hospital there has been an increasing number of maternity cases and these have not always had the isolation from surgical cases that should have prevailed.

Dr. D. V. Courtwright, president of the Medical Society, said it was believed a $20,000 bond issue would provide sufficient funds for an addition for a maternity ward. The physicians discussed the project with an architect before establishing a figure they believed would be sufficient to take care of the needed addition.

No U. S. Aid Asked

The bond issue would cover the entire amount of the improvement. No federal aid is available for the project, physicians said. Berger Hospital, opened in June, 1930, has had a steady increase in business through the years. During the first half of 1939 the hospital had the largest volume of business and collections in its history. On several occasions this year all hospital rooms have been filled with patients and it was necessary to put patients on the sun porches.

Whether the bond issue must be submitted to voters is up to city council, physicians explained. It was doubted if the city could issue $20,000 in bonds without a vote of the people. Carl C. Leist, city solicitor, said a check would have to be made to determine the bonded indebtedness of the city before he could state whether a vote would be necessary.

One Issue Refused

In August, 1938, Circleville voters defeated a bond issue for $10,000 for a hospital addition. At that time the estimated cost of the addition was $18,000, including the city's share of $9,000 and the government's, $8,100.

The issue was submitted to voters with two other bond issues, one for $9,000 for a boulevard lighting system and the other for $12,000 for an addition to the city building. City officials believed the hospital issue was defeated largely due to being submitted with the other issues.

This situation, it is considered in Berlin, might enable Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Premier Edouard Daladier to actually elude their obligations to Poland.

If it is correct that Hitler is awaiting attainment by the defense forces of their immediate goal with a view to another last effort for peaceful solution, the British and French ambassadors may have to wait some hours yet for his reply to the ultimatum.

LONDON REPORTS NAZI ADVANCES

came convinced that Air Minister Goering was right in his boast that Germany's air defenses were impenetrable.

France and Great Britain meanwhile were mobilizing, and it was expected that France could put 8,000,000 effectives into the field and Britain almost as many.

Therefore, Germany pointed out in the first official war bulletin, "strong forces (both land and air) have been retained in central and western Germany."

Some Skeptical

Some military observers in Britain were skeptical about the claims advanced in Berlin for the army striking in a three-pronged advance from Silesia on either side of the Vistula's headwaters.

The advance towards Cracow which the Germans claim—and which would put them deep into the rich coal and industrial area of Polish Silesia—could have been made only through the rough Tatras mountains, part of the wild Carpathian range.

Of all Poland's frontiers, this is the most easily defensible.

The gateway through the Tatras is the Jablonkowska pass—but if the Germans negotiated this "Thermopylae" so easily, observers pointed out, it must mean that Polish resistance there was negligible.

It is generally known, however, that Poland has had powerful military forces posted on its borders for many months, and it was presumed that Poland certainly would put up stout resistance on its strongest wall.

The military picture from the German standpoint, according to the communiques as published here, is this:

"In the course of the German combat action from Silesia, Pomerania, and East Prussia, the anticipated first successes were achieved on all fronts.

"Troops advancing across the mountains have reached the line between Neumarkt and Sucha. South of Maderich-Ostrau, troops crossed the Olsa River at Teschen.

DECLARATIONS AGAINST NAZI ACTS AWAITED

noted that the government was "not at the moment in a position to make a statement," whereupon the upper chamber adjourned.

Coincident with this unexpected delay in Britain's action with regard to Germany's move on Poland, the national executive committee of the British Labor party decided to refrain from participation in a "war cabinet" at the present juncture, although it reaffirmed support of Chamberlain's main policy in resistance of aggression.

As London took on a full wartime appearance, the government quite naturally declined all public information regarding fleet, troop and aerial dispositions, but the nation was assured that nothing had been neglected.

The last school children continued their orderly and smooth evacuation of big cities, with evacuation of the blind, cripples and others beginning this afternoon.

Following Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement, parliament continues, in order to pass a heavy new program of war legislation, including a conscription bill affecting all men from the ages of 18 to 41.

War Possibility Talked

The possibility of war was the sole topic everywhere, but the orate of the population outwardly continued high, with workers attending to their business equipped with gas masks and torches.

Newspaper sales touched sensational heights.

The new war cabinet, it was predicted, will consist of a small number of men for streamlining action, but its scope will be enlarged to include leaders of varying shades of opinion.

Among the new members, it was suggested may be Winston Churchill, conservative who held all three defense portfolios at various times during the World War; Arthur Greenwood, laborite leader of the opposition, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, liberal. Less prominence now is given to the chances of David Lloyd George, war-time premier and Anthony Eden, former foreign secretary who battled against Chamberlain's now-discarded policy of appeasement, to rejoin the cabinet.

Such a cabinet, it was stated, would demonstrate the solidarity of Great Britain in the current emergency.

Various members of the cabinet, especially Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, and the defense ministers were to confer this morning before the meeting of Parliament.

Chamberlain's pessimism was borne out by a statement of the official German news agency, that Britain "wants a deliberately-prepared European war," and that "the German people are prepared to wage even a ten-year war."

To Fill Obligations

Britain and France, the prime minister stressed, will "without hesitation fulfill their obligations to Poland" if Hitler gives the expected negative.

While no time limit was given in the note presented in Berlin last night by Ambassador Henderson in a meeting with Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, the embassy was told to make it clear that Britain and France would tolerate no delay.

Moreover, continued military operations by Germany in Poland, it was felt here, would be considered as a negative reply.

Under the decree signed by the king yesterday, scores of thousands of men from all walks of life donned uniforms today, and transportation facilities were held in readiness in the early hours of the morning to transport them and the children and invalids who remain to be removed from cities.

Evacuation Nears End

Evacuation of London, by some 400,000 children was virtually completed overnight.

Control of all railroads was taken over by the Ministry of Transport.

All sides of the "ARP," or civilian air raid protection services, were called into active duty today. Members of rescue and demolition parties were ordered to report to assembly points immediately.

London was rapidly assuming a wartime appearance, with authorities now confident they are ready for anything the week end may bring.

DANCING, singing, romance and laughs are represented by the topnotchers in their respective fields in the star-packed cast of the new M-G-M musical, "Honolulu," which opens at the Circle Theatre for a three day showing. Eleanor Powell, the screen's renowned Queen of Taps, handles the dancing end of the lavish new picture, with the other headliners composed of Robert Young and the inimitable comedy team of Burns and Allen.

FRANCE

asserting that Germany had merely "counter attacked Poland in national defense."

As a result, the French parliament is expected to declare its readiness to fulfill its engagements to Poland and proclaim that a state of war with Germany exists.

Today's meeting was probably the last parliamentary session until an Armistice. A number of deputies, all of whom are less than forty, have been called to the colors. One member of the cabinet, Jean Zay, minister of education, has reported to barracks as well.

Leaving no defensive measure uncovered, France took two new steps to aid her military forces and guarantee internal quiet.

Communists Sentenced

A Communist roundup which has been going on for several days reached its peak today when scores of alleged Reds, arrested for distributing hand-bills, were sentenced to three months in jail and given the nominal fine of 50 francs.

Hundreds of men and women, accused of Communist subversive activities, have been arrested in Paris, especially in the "red belt" surrounding the metropolis, in Lille, industrial city of the North, and other points.

Another government step was cancellation of all bus service—the mainstay of municipal transportation in Paris—because the buses are needed to transport newly-mobilized troops.

France's attitude towards Germany in the present crisis was made clear in the significant tone of the press. Since the newspapers are under severe censorship, and therefore their news articles and editorials have government approval, importance was seen in the fact that papers were permitted to indulge in violent polemics against Chancellor Hitler and the German people.

Hitler "Monster"

Said the Petit-Parisien: "It is war again after 21 years. One man alone, a former soldier in the trenches, is responsible. What a monster!"

"Germans, whether directed by Frederic William I, William II, or Hitler, are always Germans."

"The French sincerely wanted peace; now, because of that, they will do all that is humanly possible to defeat German militarism."

"Hitler has committed his greatest folly if he is confident of victory."

In similar vein, Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, who has close connections with the French foreign office, asserted that Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels of Germany warned Hitler of a catastrophe and forecast a fate for him similar to that of Kaiser Wilhelm II.

"Hitler," she said, "menaces the individual liberty of everyone in Europe. If he is victorious, ancient slavery will be revived."

"In a conversation with Hitler on the night of Aug. 31, Goebbels fought to the last minute to persuade Hitler to contend for certain rights in Danzig and wait six months before acting against Poland. Otherwise, Mme. Tabouis said Goebbels told Hitler, a catastrophe would result and Hitler would be banished."

The writer said unrest was growing in Germany, with Reich workers forming groups opposed to the government's policy, and with discontented women, trying to buy what might be available in the stores, opposing policemen and crying: "We don't want war—Hitler, leave the world in peace."

The women, Mme. Tabouis reported, openly cried out: "stories of persecutions of Germans in Poland are bluff."

The hostility of the population in Germany against war is strong, she wrote, that the Nazis are "stupidified."

City's Theatres Offer 'Oomph', Music And Romance

ANN SHERIDAN is finding out that her selection as "America's Oomph Girl" is an honor that carries its penalties. The award was made while Ann was working in her latest Warner Bros. picture, "The Angels Wash Their Faces," which is coming to the Grand Sunday. "I've never been so unmercifully kidded in my life," Ann confessed several days later. "Open season on the 'oomph' girl has been declared at the Warner Bros. Studio, and wherever I turn I am subjected to a gentle but very effective species of 'ribs' and jokes.

JASCHA HEIFETZ, the world's greatest violinist, makes his film bow in Samuel Goldwyn's "They Shall Have Music," which starts a run at the Cliftona Theatre on Sunday, and brings to the screen for the first time his immortal musical genius.

DANCING, singing, romance and laughs are represented by the topnotchers in their respective fields in the star-packed cast of the new M-G-M musical, "Honolulu," which opens at the Circle Theatre for a three day showing. Eleanor Powell, the screen's renowned Queen of Taps, handles the dancing end of the lavish new picture, with the other headliners composed of Robert Young and the inimitable comedy team of Burns and Allen.

LONDON REPORTS NAZI ADVANCES

came convinced that Air Minister Goering was right in his boast that Germany's air defenses were impenetrable.

France and Great Britain meanwhile were mobilizing, and it was expected that France could put 8,000,000 effectives into the field and Britain almost as many.

Therefore, Germany pointed out in the first official war bulletin, "strong forces (both land and air) have been retained in central and western Germany."

Some Skeptical

Some military observers in Britain were skeptical about the claims advanced in Berlin for the army striking in a three-pronged advance from Silesia on either side of the Vistula's headwaters.

The advance towards Cracow which the Germans claim—and which would put them deep into the rich coal and industrial area of Polish Silesia—could have been made only through the rough Tatra mountains, part of the wild Carpathian range.

Of all Poland's frontiers, this is the most easily defensible.

The gateway through the Tatras is the Jablonowska pass—but if the Germans negotiated this "Thermopylae" so easily, observers pointed out, it must mean that Polish resistance there was negligible.

It is generally known, however, that Poland has had powerful military forces posted on its borders for many months, and it was presumed that Poland certainly would put up stout resistance on all its strongest walls.

DECLARATIONS AGAINST NAZI ACTS AWAITED

nounced that the government was "not at the moment in a position to make a statement," whereupon the upper chamber adjourned.

Coincident with this unexpected delay in Britain's action with regard to Germany's move on Poland, the national executive committee of the British Labor party decided to refrain from participation in a "war cabinet" at the present juncture, although it reaffirmed support of Chamberlain's main policy in resistance of aggression.

As London took on a full wartime appearance, the government quite naturally declined all public information regarding fleet, troop and aerial dispositions, but the nation was assured that nothing had been neglected.

The last school children continued their orderly and smooth evacuation of big cities, with evacuation of the blind, cripples and others beginning this afternoon.

Following Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement, parliament continues, in order to pass a heavy new program of war legislation, including a conscription bill affecting all men from the ages of 18 to 41.

War Possibility Talked

The possibility of war was the sole topic everywhere, but the orale of the population outwardly continued high, with workers attending to their business equipped with gas masks and torches.

Newspaper sales touched sensational heights.

The new war cabinet, it was predicted, will consist of a small number of men for streamlining action, but its scope will be enlarged to include leaders of varying shades of opinion.

Among the new members, it was suggested may be Winston Churchill, conservative who held all three defense portfolios at various times during the World War; Arthur Greenwood, laborite leader of the opposition; and Sir Archibald Sinclair, liberal. Less prominence now is given to the chances of David Lloyd George, war-time premier and Anthony Eden, former foreign secretary who battled against Chamberlain's now-discarded policy of appeasement, to rejoin the cabinet.

Such a cabinet, it was stated, would demonstrate the solidarity of Great Britain in the current emergency.

Various members of the cabinet, especially Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, and the defense ministers were to confer this morning before the meeting of Parliament.

Chamberlain's pessimism was borne out by a statement of the official German news agency, that Britain "wants a deliberately-prepared European war," and that "the German people are prepared to wage even a ten-year war."

To Fill Obligations

Britain and France, the prime minister stressed, will "without hesitation fulfill their obligations to Poland" if Hitler gives the expected negative.

While no time limit was given in the note presented in Berlin last night by Ambassador Henderson in a meeting with Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, the embassy was told to make it clear that Britain and France would tolerate no delay.

Moreover, continued military operations by Germany in Poland, it was felt here, would be considered as a negative reply.

ive death on demilitarized Polish towns.

The Nazi government alone today had failed to respond to the American executive's appeal against resort to "this inhuman form of barbarism." England, France and Italy, other potential belligerents, advised Washington they would respect civilian populations if their opponents did.

It was the dramatic broadcast from London of the evacuation of little children, gas masks in hand, that led to President Roosevelt's decision to speak Sunday at 9 P. M. (Circleville time) over the three radio networks.

Early Reports

White House Secretary Stephen T. Early, rushing back from a North Carolina vacation, was impressed with the anxiety of scores along the road for fear the same situation might be brought home to their own children. He reported his observations to the President immediately on arrival in Washington and announcement of the broadcast followed.

"We sense a feeling on the part of the country to hear the president direct," said Early.

Throughout the night and into this morning's gray dawn, lights burned bright in the state department where fateful dispatches rolled in from American diplomats in the theatre of war. At the urgency of Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, Mr. Roosevelt did not again remain up all night perusing them and using the trans-Atlantic phone.

Troops are advancing on Katowice and Czesochowa.

"In the Corridor our troops have reached the Netze River, and fighting proceeds before Graudenz. Forces advancing from East Prussia are fighting deep in Polish territory."

The German air force, the bulletin said, "holds air domination over Polish territory."

Bombings were carried out—on military works and air fields only, according to the German version, but on civilian populations according to the Poles—on these major cities:

Warsaw, Lodz, Cracow, Katowice, Lwow, Graudenz, Poznan, Brest, Litovsk, Rhamel, Putzig, Terespol, and many smaller points.

asserting that Germany had merely "counter attacked Poland in national defense."

As a result, the French parliament is expected to declare its readiness to fulfill its engagements to Poland and proclaim that a state of war with Germany exists.

Today's meeting was probably the last parliamentary session until an Armistice. A number of deputies, all of whom are less than forty, have been called to the colors. One member of the cabinet, Jean Zay, minister of education, has reported to barracks as well.

Leaving no defensive measure uncovered, France took two new steps to aid her military forces and guarantee internal quiet.

Communists Sentenced

A Communist roundup which has been going on for several days reached its peak today when scores of alleged Reds, arrested for distributing hand-bills, were sentenced to three months in jail and given the nominal fine of 50 francs.

Hundreds of men and women, accused of Communist subversive activities, have been arrested in Paris, especially in the "red belt" surrounding the metropolis, in Lille, industrial city of the North, and other points.

Another government step was cancellation of all bus service—the mainstay of municipal transportation in Paris—because the buses are needed to transport newly-mobilized troops.

France's attitude towards Germany in the present crisis was made clear in the significant tone of the press. Since the newspapers are under severe censorship, and therefore their news articles and editorials have government approval, importance was seen in the fact that papers were permitted to indulge in violent polemics against Chancellor Hitler and the German people.

Hitler "Monster"

Said the Petit-Parisien: "It is war again after 21 years. One man alone, a former soldier in the trenches, is responsible. What a monster!"

"Germans, whether directed by Frederic William I, William II, or Hitler, are always Germans."

"The French sincerely wanted peace; now, because of that, they will do all that is humanely possible to defeat German militarism."

"Hitler has committed his greatest folly if he is confident of victory."

In similar vein, Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, who has close connections with the French foreign office, asserted that Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels of Germany warned Hitler of a catastrophe and forecast a fate for him similar to that of Kaiser Wilhelm II.

"Hitler," she said, "menaces the individual liberty of everyone in Europe. If he is victorious, ancient slavery will be revived."

"In a conversation with Hitler on the night of Aug. 31, Goebbels fought to the last minute to persuade Hitler to contend for certain rights in Danzig and wait six months before acting against Poland. Otherwise, Mme. Tabouis

Virginio Gayda, who often speaks for Premier Mussolini, wrote today in the Giornale D'Italia:

"Italy has done her utmost to avoid a conflict; now it is up to the other powers to localize the conflict."

His statement followed announcement that Italy is preserving neutrality.
